

Patents, Globalization, And Public Health:
Effects of The WTO TRIPS Agreement On HIV/AIDS Related Deaths***

Samuel Troper
2013 ½ O St. NW,
Washington, DC 20036

samuel.troper@holocron.foundation

1-614-668-0312

Keywords:

Patents, Globalization, World Trade Organization, HIV, AIDs, TRIPS Agreement

Running Title:

Patents, Globalization, and Public Health

Key Messages:

There is evidence that strong patent laws may damage public health outcomes.

Strong patent laws may have a disproportionately strong and negative effect in least developed countries.

The role of patents needs to be critically and objectively evaluated.

Acknowledgements:

I thank David Harrington for significant constructive criticism, Eric Seiber and Amy Ferketich for constructive comments and insights, and PJ Glandon for mentorship throughout my career. I thank Kenyon College for providing me with financial aid while I worked on this paper.

Word Count:

Without appendices: 2240

With appendices: 3043